

The Kona Pacific curriculum is an educational program that embraces the values of Hawaiian culture, with particular focus on environmental education and community sustainability through understanding and respect for the people, land, and waters of Hawai'i. As in any nature based curriculum/experience this involves walking/skipping or running in nature on uneven terrain, jump roping, hula hooping, climbing and other outdoor games/recreation this creates the potential for hazard. Potential hazards include but are not limited to: trips and falls on uneven terrain or holes in the ground, scratches and bruises, eye injuries from branches, head injuries from falls or hits to the head, bee stings, cane grass or other skin irritation and random pig encounters. The above list of perceived dangers exists and is made available to you in order that you can proceed with caution and keep safety first in mind when venturing out on our campus. Student, Staff and Visitor safety are a priority and we want the community to be aware of the potential for hazards.
